

RETIREMENT AND SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITIES

What is Independent Living?

Independent living communities are also known as retirement communities, retirement homes or senior housing.

When a senior chooses an independent living community, he or she has the physical and mental capacity to live independently, but wants companionship from others his/her age.

Often times there is a basic rate that covers all independent living services with an additional fee for special services. At many retirement communities, you will also be able to save money by cutting out certain expenses.

Here are some typical services that MAY be included in independent living:

- Monthly rent and all-inclusive utilities, except local telephone services and cable
- One to three restaurant-style, chef-prepared meals in a community dining room
- Maintenance repairs, including appliance, safety and living repairs and updates
- Housekeeping, including laundering of linens and towels
- Weekly, socially-engaging activities
- Transportation for shopping, medical and off-site activities
- Exercise and activity programs
- Onsite beauty and barber salon
- Social programs and activities

It's important to ask each community about their individual costs and services, as they can vary by community.
